communicable, is individually controllable and anyone with dental caries is not a menace to the public health as is one with typhoid. Safeguarding the consumer from waterborne harm is quite different from using the water supply as a medicine bottle to administer a potent chemical for its effect in the body. Fluoridation is not a true public health measure. The absence of fluoride from a public water supply does not constitute a public health hazard.

Further "potential poisons in therapeutic doses" are generally under the strict supervision of the doctor who prescribes them. The wide difference between the two halogens, chlorine and fluorine, needs no comment except to point out that Ast's equating them is spurious since the halide or an acid of fluorine is used in fluoridation projects, whereas the halogen gas chlorine, not its halide, is used in water supply treatment. The attempt to justify fluoridation as a valid public health measure by equating it with chlorination is false.

Also false, is the assertion that "fluoridation prevents, it does not treat or cure a disease and therefore is not medication." Must it be assumed that most doctors of medicine or dentistry do not protest this astonishing falsehood because of unawareness of the assertion or are they in fear of involvement?

THE FLUORIDATION FRONT

DELIBERATELY MISLEADING

ARGUMENTS

The hierarchy in the ADA, in a fanatic desire to promote the "dental image," insists that it is the "duty" of the dentists to "battle" for fluoridation. Leading advocates have not hesitated to deliberately mislead and misinform the many who have blindly accepted the promotional propaganda. Many false analogies, assertions, and clinches used as ammunition in this "battle" are made to convince not only the uncritical in the medical and dental professions, but also citizen groups, local governments, State Legislators and even courts of law.

Equating chlorination with fluoridation of water supplies originated in 1944 with Dr. Ast, the Director of the Newburgh, N.Y., artificial fluoridation test city. This analogy, because of its prominence in the promotional tactics, deserves special attention. Specifically, Ast stated: "Fluorine is a potentially toxic substance. However, there is ample evidence of satisfactory use of potential poisons, in therapeutic doses, to provide lifesaving and health-improving measures. No better example of such a public health procedure could be cited than the use of chlorine, which like fluorine is a halogen and a potentially toxic element; yet chlorine is almost universally added to public water supplies to make them safe."

In chlorination of water supplies, chlorine gas acts as a germicide, purifying the water by destroying disease bearing germs such as typhoid and other harmful bacteria. The chlorine gas diminishes in strength as it is used up in the process, and in excess can be tested. This purifying is done before the water reaches the consumer at the water tap. It does not medically treat the consumer, it treats the water making it safe to drink. Anyone with typhoid (or any like contagious, communicable disease) is not only himself endangered but is a menace to the health of others. Chlorination of water supplies is a true public health measure.

In fluoridation, on the contrary, a fluoride chemical is added as a solid. It does not react in the water as a gas. It does nothing to ensure the safety or potability of the water, and it is tasteless with no warning of excess. The fluoride chemical is intended to reach the consumer in undiminished strength for the purpose of acting within the bodies of children while their teeth are forming. It thus becomes compulsory for all to partake of this medication. Dental caries is not a waterborne disease, is not

ICE CAPADES '69

The 1969-70 edition of Ice Capades certainly is keeping up with the times and current trends of the Country. Two of the featured productions in this year's spectacular are appropriately named "LOVE, LOVE, LOVE AND MORE LOVE" and "SIGHTS AND SOUNDS."

The 30th Anniversary show opens a 12-day stand at the E.S. Coliseum, Wed., Nov. 19.

A huge atomizer filled with Spray of Love, compliments of Venus and showered on the unsuspecting is Ice Capades solution to one of the problems in today's world.

To Bert Bachrach's "What the World Needs Now" dashing skaters indiscriminately spray the powerful love potion on earthlings. Instant happiness!

"Love, Love, Love and More Love" is one of several beautifully costumed production numbers. Multi-Vision and Magic Screen film techniques, both introduced by Ice Capades over the past few years, are used more imaginatively than ever this season.

The "Love" production culminates in a psychedelic lighting freakout on the ice while Venus and her skating messengers watch their handiwork on the immense motion picture screen within the set.

Original music, imaginative staging and the innovation of multi-projector and multi-screen film effects in Ice Capades has made the ice spectacular stand alone when it comes to arena entertainment.

From the downbeat of the conductor's baton, the multi-magic of film and live action begins in the opening production "Sights and Sounds." The sights and sounds are strictly 1970, as lovely Mitsuko Funakoshi, in a mod-mood, dances over the ice to Ice Capades' musical director James Harbert's original score.

Film segments are incorporated throughout the show and highlight the "Love, Love, Love and More Love" production and the "A.I.M." number, a spy-spoof which culminates in a psychedelic light show.

The production created specially for children is "Welcome to Our World." Giant-size toys and dolls come to life and skate, and an over-stuffed daschund takes kiddies from the audience for a ride around the ice.

Solo performances are spaced throughout the 2 1/2 hour show. Topping the case of skating champions is Olympic Gold Medal Winner Wolfgang Schwarz; World Free Style Champion Tommy Litz; 1969 Canadian Champion Linda Carbonetto and Olympic Bronze Medal Champions Margot and Danne; the beautiful Mitsuko Funakoshi and dynamic Billy Chapel.

Comedy sequences spice the show and are supplied by Austria's Hans Leiter; Terry Head from England; the new boy-girl team of Hans Mueller & Pepe and the spectacular trampoline routines of Vic Zoble.

The plain fact is that some people arrive bringing the party with them; and when they go away, the party goes away, too.

CENTENNIAL CLIMAX AT AIC PARK

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — This city's salute to intercollegiate football's Centennial will come to a climax next Saturday afternoon, Nov. 1, between the halves of the AIC-Central Conn. game at AIC Park. Kick-off is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

The Centennial program began Oct. 16 in the heart of the city's Central Business District when the J.C.A. of Greater Springfield (Chamber of Commerce), in cooperation with the City of Springfield, Chevrolet Motor Div. of G.M.C., AIC and Springfield College saluted Bob Blackman, Dartmouth football coach; Angelo "Bert" Bertelli, 1943 Heisman Trophy winner from Notre Dame; Billy Wise, former Cathedral H.S. coach; and Walter R. Graham, retired sports editor of the Springfield Newspapers. They were also honored by the Exchange Club of Springfield at a noon luncheon.

Store window displays throughout the Central Business District accentuate this city's contribution to intercollegiate football. And, during the annual Fall sales promotion, 50 pairs of tickets were given as prizes to this Saturday's game at AIC Park.

On Sat., Nov. 1, AIC, along with Myles W. Berry, dist. manager, Chevrolet Motor Div., members of the All-Time AIC Football Team, all previous AIC football captains, and several residents of W. Mass. who played intercollegiate football will be recognized between the halves of the Alumni Homecoming game.

The All-Time Football Team, as well as the All-Time AIC Basketball and Hockey Teams will receive plaques at the Homecoming Banquet in the AIC Commons Sat. evening. Nick Rodis, Brandeis U. athletic dir. and former AIC coach, will be m.c.

As of last Friday, 27 former collegiate players from 15 colleges will take part in the half-time ceremonies.

Two from Agawam are Bill Budness, Boston U., linebacker of the Oakland Raiders who will be represented by his wife, and Roger Leclerc, Trinity College, who played with the Chicago Bears.

According to Jerry Healy, AIC's director of public relations who is coordinating this city's Centennial program, many more former intercollegiate players are expected to attend next Saturday. This is the only city conducting a Centennial observance on such a large scale, and AIC is believed to be the only college saluting other collegiate players for their contributions to the history of football.

All copy for this newspaper must be typed, double spaced originals. No carbons, or items which appear elsewhere before we publish, will be considered. Deadline, Monday A.M.

CONNELLY'S STATEMENT ON RE-ELECTION

Selectman Edward W. Connelly, GOP candidate for re-election to the Agawam Board of Selectmen, issued the following statement:

There are 3 pertinent areas to this campaign which I feel must be stressed for the consideration of Agawam voters in our annual town elections on Tuesday, Nov. 18. These are covered summarily below but will be elaborated upon as the campaign progresses.

First I submitted an article for the 1969 Town Meeting warrant which was unanimously adopted, namely, the appointment of a committee to study and report to the next Town Meeting relative to a possible change in Town Charter. There are many options available for consideration and I feel sure the qualifications of the appointed committee will enable presentation of some of the best for Agawam. However, the underlying cause for the article which I sponsored, is my strong belief that now, as never before, the need for full-time management in Agawam Administration is an absolute must. All the business background and ability possessed by a candidate is weakened when everyday decision making is the responsibility of a 3 man board, meeting once or twice a week. Whatever option the committee recommends has to be the next progressive step necessary for the orderly growth of our community.

Secondly, and in keeping with change, I will press for the initiation and hopefully, the future approval of non-partisan government for Agawam. I firmly believe that where local office and local issues are involved — partisanship should not be the factor. The best way to run a local school system, plan an effective road improvement program, modernize a police dep't is the most efficient way — and that should not have to mean Republican or Democratic. A great step toward non-partisanship is already a fact of life if one considers that Agawam Republicans are out numbered by Independent registrations approximately 3 - 1 and Agawam Democrats are out numbered by Independent registrations approximately 2 - 1. I have sincerely practiced non-partisanship in appointments where I have stressed a person's ability and willingness to serve with no consideration of his political affiliation. We may differ in political ideology in Vietnam, Washington and the Common Market but in Agawam we're for what's best for Agawam.

My true concern in this area of non-partisanship is the untapped wealth of talent and experiences available in our town which remains dormant as a result of election partisanship. I believe non-partisanship elections would create a civic climate suitable for participation by able Agawam citizens, who at present have no inclination to be tagged with a political id. just because they are interested in the progress of the town in which they live.

Concluding this initial statement, I face an opponent who again stresses his participation in the area of reducing taxes as the basis of his campaign. I believe his claims have been successfully refuted in the past and I honestly believe that common sense will prevail again in this matter of single-handed tax reduction. In order to clarify any remaining doubt in the mind of the Agawam voter, I urge all PTAs, church groups, service organizations, etc. to immediately schedule a series of meetings, to be held in all areas of the town so that as many people as possible can attend between now and election day. I will attend to discuss or debate my opponent for the purpose of truth in campaigning on our local tax situation.

I take this opportunity also to seek your support of my candidacy for re-election as your Selectman.

Edward W. Connelly
